

BAYONNE WAR COMPARES WITH LUDLOW DISASTER

Bayonne, N. J., July 23.—After night broken by intermittent spit of rifle and revolver fire, Bayonne today entered on third day of a strike that in bloodiness compares only with those of Ludlow, Colo., and Calumet, Mich.

Strikers began gathering about the Standard Oil Company's Tidewater plant at dawn today, shielding themselves from the guards' rifles behind sheds and the high board fence that was splintered by the incessant fusillade of late yesterday.

The guards were barricaded behind a ten-foot concrete wall. The strikers were sheltered behind a fence 100 yards away. The fire of guards raked a 30-foot strip of 22d street, the heart of the strike zone, with a withering leaden hail. That 30-foot strip was "No Man's land," over which but a few of the hardy ones dared cross. Small children, however, played about the danger zone, peering corners and enjoying the "fun" immensely. The police made no effort to stop the firing, or to get the children out of the way. It was here that two men fell dead and a half dozen others dropped from the fire of the company's guards.

The authorities admitted they did not know how many had been injured. The tenements of the strikers are almost within the shadows of the plant walls and it is thought many more were hit and instead of being hurried to the hospital were smuggled into the homes and their wounds treated.

Calling of state troops seemed imminent this morning. Sheriff Kinkead with a force of deputies was on the scene, but sheriff admitted he and his men could do but little in the event the strikers and guards began a repetition of yesterday's battle. Gov. Fielder has promised to hurry troops into "war zone" in an hour's notice.

There were many guns among the strikers today. The absence of guns with which to return fire of the guards was a handicap keenly felt by strikers yesterday and they utilized last night to get a supply from New York, Jersey City and nearby towns.

There was an exciting skirmish between the guards and strikers shortly before dawn today. One guard was reported injured. None of the strikers were hit so far as could be learned.

Efforts to remove the barricades placed across the 22d street car line, which traverses the middle of the strike zone, were futile.

GIRLS TO GET REAL CHANCE IN REAL HOMES

A new social justice was put into practice in Chicago, today when ten prominent women threw open their homes to as many girls of the street.

The girls will be made real members of the family. The women have pledged themselves to treat them as daughters and have instructed their own children to treat them as sisters.

Mrs. Clarence Summy, president of the Protestant Women's National association, a Chicagoan, is sponsor for the move.

"However much it hurts them, folks nowadays are being made to realize the falseness of the belief that once a girl is stained or tainted she is forever damned. This is no more true of a girl than of a boy."
